CIVICS CLASS HERE STUDYING VOCATIONS

The Civics students of Miss Christina's Freshman class at the Appomattox high school, are studying vocations. The class is trying to find out about different vocations so that the students may wisely decide what they want to be. A number of interesting speakers have visited the class. Miss Violet Ramsey talked to the class on librarianship as a career. Lieut. J. A. Bingham spoke about being a traffic officer. R. L. Burke talked to the class on banking and the type of personality needed in banking. Mrs. Joe Irby spoke to the class on the subject of nursing. The students have learned some of the qualifications for different occupations and vocations, and something of the type of work citizens of the local community are doing. The class feels that this is valuable training.
